

16/06/2010

ASEAN Secretariat, Jakarta, Indonesia

Dear Sir/Madam:

Devin Maeztri

Devin Maeztri studied for a Masters of Environment at the University of Melbourne from 2007- 09, specializing in aspects of environmental governance, policy and communications, and sustainability. She was awarded an Australian Partnerships Scholarship. She previously studied landscape architecture at Bogor.

Our Masters program allows students to select classes from across the University and to link these in a tailored program of study, coordinated by my Office, that fits with their skills and career aspirations.

Devin did extremely well academically, assisted by fluent spoken and written English and an inquiring and diligent approach to study. She gained Distinction grades in seven of her sixteen classes and was one of our top performing students. Most of these require substantial essays as part of the assessment, and sometimes group work.

Devin was also a core participant in university and city environmental activity while at Melbourne. She worked to sustain two sustainable cities research networks and websites, and was heavily involved in the management of the Postgraduate Environment Network on campus.

We at the Office were very sorry to see her leave, and wished her well in her search for environmental jobs in Indonesia. She is currently working at the University of Melbourne's International office in Jakarta, and has been a participant in several conferences and events around Jakarta since she returned there in 2009.

I cannot recommend her highly enough to you: Devin is a smart, approachable and efficient person with an outgoing personality. She would be an asset to any team, and especially in this project management and planning role.

Yours sincerely

Associate Professor Simon Batterbury
Director
Office for Environmental Programs
www.environment.unimelb.edu.au

simonpjb@unimelb.edu.au